By the Associated Press.
NEWARK, N. J., June 7.—The first post-graduate university in America, for the pursuit of advanced learning and exploration in pure science, is to be established here with an initial endowment of $5,000,000.

The money is given by Louis Bamberger, retired merchant, and Mrs. Felix Fuld, his sister and widow of his late partner. They will make additions to the fund later.

The institution will be known as the Institute for Advanced Study, and it will have as its first director Dr. Abraham Flexner, former secretary and director of the division of Medical Education of the General Education Board of New York City.

The only qualification for entrance to the institute will be intellectual, no account being taken of race, religion or sex, and scholarships will be provided for those who need them.

For the first year the trustees of the institute will be Mr. Bamberger, Mrs. Fuld, Dr. Flexner, Edgar S. Bamberger of Newark, Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, Dr. Julius F. Adams of Baltimore, Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College; John R. Harkin of Newark, president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.; Alanson B. Houghton, former Ambassador to Germany and Great Britain; Herbert H. Lehman, Ex-Governor of New York; Dr. Florence R. The institute will be located in Newark or its vicinity. It will occupy temporary quarters, while plans for permanent buildings and equipment are being developed.

Unlike other American universities, this will have no undergraduate body nor any professional schools. It will provide facilities with which eminent men of learning may devote themselves to research, and with which advanced students may be trained for and beyond the degree of doctor of philosophy or other degrees of equal rank.

G. D. EATON, FOUNDER AND EDITOR OF 'PLAIN TALK,' DIES

Publisher of Magazine Succumbs to Heart Attack at the Age of 35.

NEW YORK, June 7.—G. D. Eaton, founder and editor of the magazine Plain Talk, died last night in St. Mark's Hospital of heart disease. He was about 35 years old.

Since he was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1912, Eaton was active in newspaper and literary work. During the last three years, since Plain Talk was founded, he devoted himself to the magazine. Earlier he contributed to magazines, notably the American Mercury, and published a novel, "Black Fury."

For a time he was on the staff of the Associated Press in New York. He also was connected with the Morning Telegraph here, and with several newspapers in Detroit.

ROBBER ALLOWED TO PLEAD GUILTY; NO REASON GIVEN

Prosecutor Declines to Tell Why He Agreed to Deferred Sentence for Lawrence G. Ahrens.

By the Associated Press.
NEWARK, N. J., June 7.—The unexpected appearance in court at Clayton yesterday of Lawrence G. Ahrens to enter a plea of guilty to a charge of robbery in a holdup of the Overland State Bank on Jan. 18, 1929, in which $25,000 was stolen, was a surprise.

At the trial, Ahrens was charged with having slain Philip with a shotgun, late yesterday afternoon Ahrens, accompanied by his attorney, Joseph Lander, and Special Prosecutor Jacob Lashly and Associate Prosecutor Attorney Charles Noe, appeared before Circuit Judge Jackson and requested that he be granted a severance from the other defendants.

In response to a question from the court, Noe responded that the plea of guilty and a deferred sentence in Ahrens' case would be acceptable to the prosecutor.

The court accepted the plea on the robbery charge and Ahrens, against whom the murder charge is still pending, was released to jail.

Neither Lashly nor Noe would discuss the State's strategy in accepting a plea of guilty from Ahrens.

"We have reasons for our action," Ahrens said, "but I don't want to state them now." The attorney said. When asked if Ahrens was to be used as a witness against the other defendants, Noe responded, "That's not the reason for the plea of guilty."

O'Hara Trial Continues.
Ahrens, an automobile mechanic, was arrested last August, was indicted on charges of first-degree murder and robbery with James McManley, William O'Hara, and Lawrence McBride. McManley is present in the Upper Michigan State Prison at Marquette, serving a term for robbery. McBride is in prison in California, and O'Hara, who has been in Clayton since 1927, is scheduled to go to trial on the robbery charge next Monday.

After his arrest Ahrens made a statement to St. Louis police to the effect that McManley and not himself had fired the shot which killed Philip. McManley, who was identified in the order and robbery, killed Philip. Ahrens was tried on the charge, a mistrial resulting, and subsequently the charge was dismissed.

REED WILL ADDRESS DEMOCRATS' MEETING

Ex-Senator to Analyze G. O. P. Record at State Gathering in Sedalia.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
SEDALIA, Mo., June 7.—Missouri Democrats gathered in Sedalia today for their first state-wide meeting since the presidential campaign of 1928. A speech on national issues by former United States Senator James A. Reed at 7 o'clock tonight will mark the climax of a day of political speeches, most of them by candidates for State and district offices.

Reed's speech is to be an analysis from the standpoint of the Democratic party of the record of the Republican party in control of the national Government. The speech will be broadcast over KMOX and the Columbia chain.

Reed's speech will bring about 2500 Democrats marshaled by the Pendergast organization. Several hundreds are expected from St. Louis and it is the expectation that the strong Democratic counties of Central Missouri will add several thousands to the crowd.

The meeting is looked upon by many Democrats as the beginning of a second campaign by Reed for the Democratic presidential nomination, and possibly as the beginning of a campaign to swing the Democratic party to an endorsement of repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment. It is not anticipated, however, that Reed will have much to say in his speech on the question of prohibition. It is known that he has written a series of articles, soon to be published, setting out his views on prohibition.

Reed has refused to discuss the presidency even with his closest friends, but the report persists that he has not abandoned the ambition which took him into the last convention as a candidate.

INDO-CHINA DISORDERS LAID TO RESTRICTIONS ON NATIVES

French Deputy Says Government Should Have Been More Lenient; Others Blame Moscow.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, June 7.—Recent disorders in Indo-China, in which French troops were killed, were attributed yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies to a too stringent Government policy toward the natives.

Deputy Moutet, Socialist, opening the discussion said the disorders, in the course of which Annamite was attacked, would not have occurred if the Government had been more lenient to the natives.

Deputy Taittinger, Conservative, of Paris, said the whole affair was traceable to Bolshevik propaganda. This view was seconded by Deputy Outrey, from Indo-China, who said Moscow was behind the whole affair. He produced a list which he said contained the instructions sent to Bolshevik propagandists from Moscow to foment uprising in the French colonies. Deputy Outrey called upon the Government to take action to make it impossible for Moscow to interfere in French colonial affairs. The session then recessed until next Friday.

3 MORE MURDERS IN CHINESE FEUD; PARLEY IS CALLED

ALLEGED KNIFE MAN CAPTURED BY CROWD

Fourth Killing in Metropolis in Two Days Occurs on Eve of District Attorney's Peace Conference.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 7.—A Chinese laundry worker was shot to death at 5704 West Madison street about 7 a. m. today. A revolver was found beside the body. Police said they thought the killing was connected with recent gun murders in other cities. The victim was not identified.

EVERETT, Mass., June 7.—Sing Wong, 40 years old, was shot to death last night in his laundry. Three shots were fired through a partition separating the front of his shop from the rear.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 7.—The fourth Chinese killing within 48 hours in the metropolitan area last night intensified police precautions in Chinatown on the eve of a today peace conference called for today by District Attorney Clegg.

Cheong Fook, 40 years old, died on the sidewalk in Forsyth street a few minutes after he had been slashed in the abdomen by a Chinese identified by bystanders as Tei Gat, 32. Eddie Gong, secretary of the Hip Sing Tong, which is at odds with the On Leong Tong, denied that either Fook or Gat was a member of the Hip Sing Tong, or as far as he knew, of any other Tong. Gat was captured by a crowd and turned over to police.

The third victim of the tong struggle here was Lui Sing, a Brooklyn laundryman, shot dead yesterday as he lay in bed. Police learned that last week Lui Sing had been offered an opportunity to contribute $5 a week to some friends who would send him a $1000 bill. He declined with thanks. The offer was repeated. He again declined. The new revolver with which he was killed was left by the body, a typical tong gesture.

PANTAGES RELEASED FROM JAIL ON BOND

Los Angeles Theater Man Gives $100,000 Bail Pending Appeal.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 7.—After spending more than seven months in the county jail, Alexander Pantages, 54-year-old theater magnate, convicted of assault on a 17-year-old dancer, Eunice Pringle, is at home with his family, following his release last on a $100,000 bond pending decision on his appeal from a one to 50 year penitentiary sentence.

His release was granted by the State Supreme Court after consideration of evidence given at the Superior Court hearings. The Supreme Court ruled the man's life was endangered by confinement. Since his incarceration Pantages has suffered several severe heart attacks.

Pantages was convicted last October of a criminal attack on Miss Pringle. She had been in his office in a downtown theater building, seeking to book her act.

Since his conviction $1,750,000 damages suit have been filed against Pantages by those involved in the trial. Miss Pringle has brought suit for $1,000,000; Nick Duney, a playwright, whom Pantages accused of conspiracy with Miss Pringle, seeks $500,000, and Tom Wiser, a State's witness, asks for $250,000.

VETERAN FALSELY IDENTIFIED AS $360,000 BANK ROBBER

Back in Hospital After Being Picked Up Many Places Because of Photo.

By the Associated Press.
BATTLE CREEK, Mich., June 7.—The man who was identified yesterday as a bank robber at Camp Custer Veterans' Bureau Hospital today after Wisconsin officers who had identified his photograph as that of a man wanted in a $360,000 bank robbery had said that he was not the man. He had spent the night in jail.

Conley said that his picture was obtained in Toledo, when he was picked up as a payroll robber and murder suspect but quickly released. Since then, he said, he has been "chasing" in Detroit, St. Louis and North Carolina for one crime or another, always because of the photograph.

"I saw my picture in a St. Louis newspaper in connection with the Wisconsin bank robbery," he said. "I was in St. Louis when I figured I'd get myself in jail again if I went to the police and told them I wasn't the right party. So I left St. Louis and let them hunt for me."

His petition states that the "jewelry" and merchandise was unlawfully removed while under control of the bank. Also named as defendants are President Ed May, Gifford J. Herbert, cashier, and William A. Britton, custodian of the safe deposit department.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"A Room for Each Child."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

READING Alice Johnson Peale's "Talks to Parents" in Monday's issue causes me to wonder if we do not need more propaganda for a "child in every room" rather than "a room for each child."

One may seem as impossible as the other—yet I believe it would be even easier for people of means to rear a child for every room than it would be for the laboring man to keep a room for each child.

Since the burden of populating this old earth rests upon the poor, let us not encourage propaganda that will make the parents of six children feel that they are not doing their duty because they do not give each child a private room. Someone may go a step farther in the next generation and advocate a private bath for each child, thus holding his devotees to the necessity of limiting their families. At that rate where will our civilization be in 50 years or so?

We cannot close our eyes to the fact that in 50 years nearly every adult living today will have passed on. If the doctrine of "quality rather than quantity" takes a much deeper hold on the populace, the extinction of the white race is easily foretold.

Let writers come forward with articles that suggest to the founding homes that they raise babies rather than skyscrapers. Instead of a room for every child, I would rather see houses that are overflowing with children and mirth and happiness. They are here in St. Louis and in every large city, but they never make the front page of a big city daily.

And why? Has not the home destroying element held full sway in the press of our country long enough? Aren't we tired of divorce and discord, gang killings and prohibition? Wouldn't it be real news if we could get some inside dope on houses that were not big enough for the families they held, and maybe a picture or two of "three kids in one bed" right on the front page of the Post-Dispatch?

ALICE MORRIS MACMANUS.

What They Meant to Say.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

TO the battle is on—the Amazons who challenge prohibition and the Amazons of the Sahara. Methinks these fair nymphs of Bacchus erred when they said, if they said, they wanted their children to learn to drink at home. From the character and integrity of these people, what they probably meant was a return to the good old days when a deacon of good vintage continually reposed on the sidewalk and the children grew up with an actual distaste for the stuff because mother taught them temperance. When you know what it is, you don't want it—that sort of psychology! Nymphs of Bacchus, guard your tongues lest you abate a good cause! MINERVA.

Says Our Car Service Is Best.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN answer to H. N.—Don't you realize that the less stops a street car makes, the quicker the passengers on the car will get to their destinations? Don't you know that by eliminating stops, faster service will be obtained? Do you know that St. Louis has, beyond a doubt, the best street car service in the United States? RIDER.

Careless Shooting Along the Meramec.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WISH to protest against the careless rifle and pistol shooting along the Meramec River by unimaginative young men. One old enough, one could think, to know better than to practice thoughtless shooting along a stream frequented by numerous campers and canoeists on week-ends.

While recently on a Sunday hiking trip along the Meramec in the vicinity of Jeddburg, one of our party came within a few inches of being hit by a rifle bullet fired by one of these irresponsible who had been shooting at a couple of blue herons.

This is a matter not only for the proper officers of the county to look into in interest of our citizens who are inclined to spend a peaceful Sunday outdoors, but also for the representatives of the State Game Commissioner, as there is good evidence of water fowl and song birds being shot along the Meramec. A. U.

Street Cars and Traffic Signals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

NOTICE that the Public Service Co. has signs posted on the rear of its informing motorists as to the exact signals to give when stopping, making left or right turns, which in my estimation is a good idea. What puzzles me is, why don't the street car crews give signals when they intend to stop, make right or left turns? I am very much in favor of this as it would prevent many accidents. If I'm driving in front of a street car and put my arm straight out, the motor-man knows that I'm going to stop and will be guided accordingly. But if I'm driving behind a street car and the motor-man has to make a stop, I receive no signal whatsoever. It seems to me that it would be a very easy matter to install some sort of electrical device informing the motorist that the car intends to make a stop and let passengers on or off, and even inform the motorist if the car is going to make a right or left turn. MOTORIST.

MUNICIPAL OPERA'S GOAL.

The production of "Nina Rosa" offers convincing proof that our Municipal Opera has attained a standard this year which is the proper goal of an opera organization identified with the city and sustained by citizens as a municipal art enterprise.

Although commendable productions of operatic entertainments have been achieved under the direction and through the labors of volunteer managers, the standard was not up to the mark which was the aspiration of the Municipal Opera Association and its leaders or the requirements of a semipublic organization representing the city. After 10 years of experience in volunteer direction, the board of directors wisely decided to adopt a new policy and that was to obtain the services of an able and experienced operatic producer to supervise the productions and to employ the best available talent for stage management, musical direction, and dramatic and vocal performances. They determined to spare no expense to insure success this season. They put in a revolving stage, the first built in an outdoor theater and the largest in the world. They adopted a program of operas every one of which was new to the municipal stage and some new to St. Louis. One exception for special reasons has been made in this program by the promised revival of "The Student Prince."

The company is no longer a stock company relying upon one group of artists to fill nearly all the parts in the season. Mr. Milton I. Shubert, the supervisor selected for the season and the operatic producer of the Shubert forces, is selecting operatic stars fitted to each production, and special dancers and chorus leaders, so that each production will be a star performance.

This policy has been justified by the beautiful production of Romberg's "Nina Rosa," which had its premiere and a long run in Chicago. It comes to St. Louis before its New York opening. With the picturesque and striking stage settings, greatly improved and speeded up by the revolving stage, and with the star artists and superb chorus, the production is a delight, both a musical and dramatic treat. Mr. Shubert promises a similar standard of beauty and merit in the 11 other productions of the season.

As the first city to venture on a summer season of opera in a great outdoor theater, St. Louis gained prestige and wide favorable attention. We believe the reputation of the city and its prestige will be greatly enhanced by this season's venture. We believe that the standard of production of the Municipal Theater in Forest Park will receive not only national-wide but world-wide acclaim.

St. Louisans have reason to be proud of the fact that while the Municipal Opera is not a venture of the municipality, it was organized and is maintained by the volunteer efforts of the citizens. It is not a money-making enterprise. It was inspired by civic spirit. The Municipal Opera Association is composed of citizens who volunteered to sustain the organization. Its board of directors and committees are volunteers who do the work without pay. Its guaranteed fund of $100,000 is subscribed voluntarily by citizens to insure its successful financing. It is therefore in a true sense a municipal enterprise, depending wholly upon the efforts and support of the people of St. Louis.

The new policy of the board of directors is on trial. It is not to be expected that perfection will be attained. But if its promises are not substantially fulfilled and if being fulfilled it does not receive the hearty support of the people that is anticipated and that it deserves, this year's effort will be a failure and the future will be uncertain. We indulge the expectation that both the efforts of the directors and the support of the public will insure an unprecedented success.

BLAME IT ON BURKE.

It was inevitable that sooner or later Fred Burke would be charged with the Grand National Bank robbery. Fred, as everyone will remember, was once a member of the Egan gang. He killed a traffic officer at St. Joseph, Mich., some months ago and escaped. Chicago police then announced that the same Burke was wanted in connection with the St. Valentine's day massacre. New York police, not to be outdone, accused Burke of killing Rothstein, Elwell and Dot King. The idea became fashionable. Burke, it seems, was the bird who killed Dr. Dillon, Lawyer Hicks and Joe Mogler. He stole the whiskey from the Jack Daniel distillery. He kidnapped Charley Ross, started the Chicago fire and arranged the deal by which Teapot Dome and Elk Hills were leased to private operators. He is Desperate Desmond, Billy the Kid, Gyp the Blood and Jack Dalton all rolled into one. Someone thought he saw Burke in Farmington one midnight about five weeks ago. That settles it. Burke did the job. He is the most convenient police character that we have had for years.

Caraway does not spell carry on.

WEBSTER GROVES SHOWS THE WAY.

The Ralph sewer law, already staggering from public attacks in other sections of the county, received from the Webster Groves Sewer District what should prove to be its knockout blow. E. Gilson Curtis, Ralph law advocate, who has dominated the board since it was organized, was ousted from the chairmanship by the two new members, Carl H. Holskamp and Dr. F. C. E. Kuhlmann. A contract with attorneys including Robert A. Roessel, who attempted to obtain a $70,000 fee after promising to lend their aid for nothing, was canceled. An order was rescinded levying a preliminary tax to repay money borrowed from a bank, and a resolution adopted providing that work be stopped and no further expense incurred.

When the next Legislature meets, it will be called upon to repeal or amend the Ralph law, which gives supervisors practically unlimited power to levy taxes and spend taxpayers' money. In the last Legislature, friends of the Ralph law succeeded in killing in committee a movement to change this outrageous piece of legislation. They will not have so easy a time in the 1930 Legislature. St. Louis County, under leadership of John E. Mooney and the Taxpayers' Protective Association, is in revolt and its fighting spirit is keyed to concert pitch. It will have a valuable ally in Jackson County, also up in arms against the law.

In the meantime, we commend the two new Webster Groves District supervisors for undoing practically everything that was accomplished by the board under the Curtis regime. The problem of the bank loan remains to be solved, but otherwise the slate is clean. Will the other sewer district boards supervisors in the county, which have followed Webster Groves District in bringing about the situation which has caused remonstrance, continue to follow it, now that it has corrected its errors?

WHAT CIVIC LEADERSHIP CAN DO.

The city has at last found a way to finance street widenings and other bond issue projects. Agreement has been reached between city officials and Stifel, Nicolaus & Co., by which the latter will purchase benefit judgments as soon as they are handed down by the courts, advancing to the city 95 per cent of their face value for immediate construction work. If the Board of Aldermen approves the plan, the long delayed work of widening Gravois road can be begun this year, and other projects now grinding through the condemnation process will be financed the moment they come from the courts. It is a $220,000 deal, that being the estimated value of benefit assessment bills which the bankers will buy.

When the bond issue was passed it contained a provision for a $250,000 revolving fund to finance street widenings, but this device has proved too inelastic for the purpose. For some years the revolving fund has been tied up in the Olive street widening and other smaller projects. The City Treasury, called upon to advance $2,000,000 for the new police headquarters and to make up a $500,000 deficit in courthouse construction cost, is depleted, ending last year with a $1,000,000 deficit. Some new way had to be found to raise money and, beginning last August, the General Council on Civic Needs addressed itself to the problem.

Last January, Charles H. Diehl of the Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the council, outlined the proposal that the city sell to the banks its final court judgments against benefited property owners, just as the banks buy special tax bills on improvements. A committee was appointed to ask the banks to work out the details with the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Since then the bankers, city officials and civic leaders have considered the plan from every financial and legal angle and, although there is apparently no precedent for this kind of financing, it seems to be entirely sound.

Under the agreement the city sacrifices 5 cents of every dollar for the advantages of money in hand. The judgments are secured, not by the city's credit, but by liens on the assessed property. Interest of 6 per cent for the first five years and 8 per cent thereafter, goes to the bankers. City and bankers co-operate in the collection of the money. It is the history of benefit judgments that approximately five years from the time they are handed down is required to collect them. The bankers, or investors to whom the benefit judgments are resold, will now wait for the money, meanwhile receiving an adequate return.

City officials share credit with the General Council on Civic Needs and the Chamber of Commerce for the solution of this vexing problem. It is a striking example of the value of leadership, original thought and aggressive public-spiritedness in municipal affairs. We trust the example will embolden civic leaders to apply those qualities to many other unsolved or partially solved questions on the docket. The agreement should also provide a stimulus for the condemnation commissions which have been dawdling for years over street widening projects. With the city in possession of the necessary funds, responsibility for any further delay will be focused upon the commissions and the courts.

LOCAL & GENERAL ITEMS.

Doc Eckener, who visited over Sunday with friends in the U. S., is now back home in Germany. . . . The "ask me another" game which had been drawing packed houses in Washington has shut down because Bishop Cannon ran out of answers and wouldn't play any more. . . . The tariff is still on the sick list and not much improved at this writing. . . . The gent who got his picture took while in our city on business some weeks ago proves not to be Mr. Carroll of Detroit at all, as he said, but a man named Casey from New York, out-going. . . . The Chicago machine gun battalion is pretty well caught up now with its target practice. . . . We hear that the corsage crop in Death Valley is breaking all records. . . . The horses are running pretty good out at the Fairmount track and Epsom Downs had a nice meet, too. . . . Some scribes from N. Y. have had some nice things to say about our outdoor shows at the park, which have now opened up for the season, weather permitting. . . . Admiral Byrd has added several to his collection of gold medals this week. . . . It is now claimed that the evil-doers who burglarized the Grand bank either forced their way through a heavy pile of cardboard or else cleverly unlocked the front door with a key. . . . Our Cardinals have been doing their best to prove what the doubters have been saying all along, that the winning streak was just an accident.

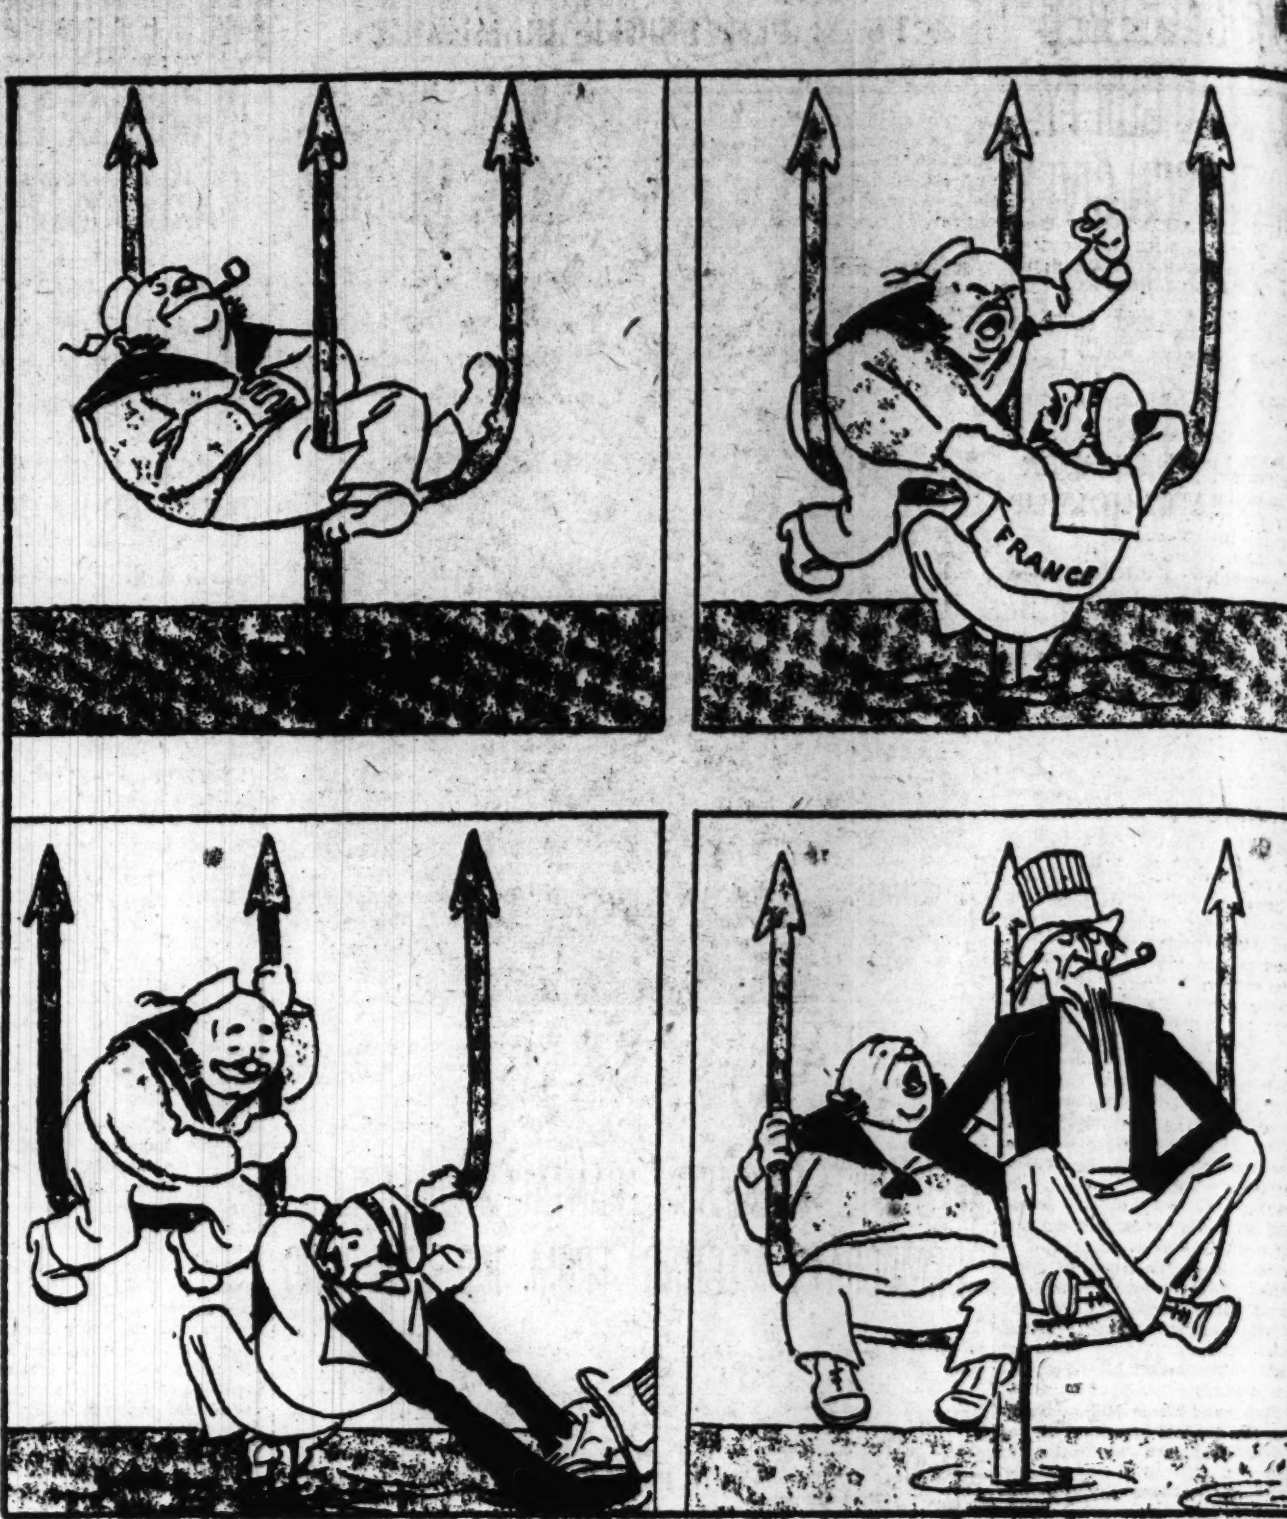

ST. LOUIS AND MONTREAL.

The Globe-Democrat commends the experience of Montreal to the consideration of our Transportation Commission as an illustration of what can be done under the franchise system "to insure a first-class service at the lowest rates consistent with cost and a fair return to the owner."

Since the franchises of the local system have still many years to run—Stanley Clarke, president of the company, says they run until 1949—there is no sound public reason why they should be extended now. If there were, the cases of St. Louis and Montreal would not be comparable. St. Louis is in Missouri, and under the laws of the land control over its public utilities which have franchises is vested in the State. Montreal, upon the other hand, is in Canada. She has home rule, that is, control over service and rates upon the street cars. There is no law of the land under which the terms of a franchise grants can be abrogated as the Missouri Supreme Court has just annulled the 8-cent fare agreement which Kansas City made with the Newman outfit under a so-called service-cost franchise.

There is, however, a way in which St. Louis can put herself in the enviable position of Montreal. That is to refuse to extend the franchises of the street railway company and substitute for them as they expire permits such as those under which the local bus lines are operating. That will substitute municipal for State control over service and rates such as Montreal enjoys and make transportation in the two cities really comparable.

As the situation stands transportation in the two cities is not comparable. To say that it is only adds one more to the long list of deceptions which have made the four years' effort of the Newman outfit to extend their St. Louis franchises a public scandal.

A GERMAN VIEW OF THE BATTLE FOR THE TRIDENT.

How Proportional Representation Works

St. Louis Aldermanic election with 60 candidates in field used as example of Hare system's principles; each voter designates first choice and alternates; by quota method, surplus of winners is distributed, no ballots are wasted and minority gets a voice; better for stable government than present victor-take-all procedure.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by An Advocate of the Hare System.

SITUATION: 14 St. Louis Aldermen to be elected from among 60 candidates by proportional representation with the single transferable vote (the Hare system).

NOMINATIONS: As at present, a citizen can get his name on ballot by paying fee to Election Board. No primary is held, thus avoiding (1) intraparty rifts (Miller-Kiel, Reed-Hay), (2) undesirable minority candidates gaining a plurality victory in a large field, (3) party-crossing by which voters help weak candidates and, and finally (4) expense to candidates and city. The Hare system in one election could furnish a more satisfactory election of our 14 Aldermen than is done now by four expensive elections (two primaries and two run-offs).

BALLOT: All 60 candidates appear in alphabetical order with address and party affiliation behind name. The preferred places on the ballot are given to each candidate on an equal number of ballots.

VOTING: At large, as is now done for the Board of Aldermen. But as in the old House of Delegates or in the present U. S. House of Representatives elections, the voter is limited to vote for one man. He may vote for a candidate in his own ward but is not forced to. Voter puts figure 1 after his first choice, 2 after his second, etc. He need make only one choice, or may make as many as he wishes. Only one choice, the highest that can be useful in electing a candidate, will be counted.

THE COUNT: The whole is made at the City Hall with each step scrutinized by press and public. Invalid ballots are discarded. This leaves say 150,000 valid ballots, which are then distributed according to the first choices marked on them. Let the result be:

Jefferson	17,548 (7345 over quota)
Lincoln	14,222 (4211 over quota)
Lincoln	11,507 (1506 over quota)
Roosevelt	9,500 (501 under quota)
Adams	8,779
Cleveland	8,140
St. candidates with less than Cleveland, but more than Monroe	350
Monroe	219
Buchanan	105
Van Buren	105

THE QUOTA: Any candidate getting 10,001 votes is elected. This quota is obtained by dividing the total valid vote (150,000) by one more than the number of offices to be chosen (14 plus 1) which gives as a quotient 10,000, to which is added 1 to get 10,001, the quota, the lowest number of votes that 14 candidates can each receive and yet use up enough ballots to preclude the winning of another quota.

When 14 candidates have each received 10,001 votes, there will be 140,014 votes used up out of the total 150,000. This leaves only 9886 ballots, not enough to form another quota. It should be noticed that 92 per cent of the ballots cast have been effective toward electing successful candidates. This is a tremendous inducement to minority activity, with the necessary effect that the majority parties put up better candidates to attract votes.

TRANSFER OF WINNERS' SURPLUS: Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, having surpassed the quota, are declared elected.

Then Washington's surplus of 7345 is taken away from him and distributed among the other candidates according to the second choices marked on them. Whenever the lower candidates reaches the 10,001 quota, no more ballots are transferred to him, but given to candidates named as next available choice. Thus if one of Washington's surplus ballots which is to be transferred has as second choice Jefferson, as third choice Lincoln and fourth choice Grundy, the ballot goes to Grundy, since it could not help Jefferson or Lincoln, after distributing Washington's surplus, the same is done for the 4211 surplus of Jefferson and the 1506 of Lincoln.

Which 7345 of Washington's ballots are taken? Although it has been demonstrated that in a large election if the surplus is taken by chance the results will be practically the same as when they are chosen mathematically, fair methods are available for this step. In the Irish Senate election procedure, there is no possibility for injustice in the selection of the surplus.

TRANSFER OF THE LOSERS' VOTES: The situation now is three elected, 11 offices still open, 57 candidates remaining in the field. Having disposed of all those who amassed a surplus, we now go to Van Buren, who got the lowest number of votes. He is declared defeated and his 105 ballots are transferred to continuing candidates, who are marked as alternative choices on these ballots. Then Buchanan is defeated and his ballots transferred. Then Monroe. Thus each succeeding low candidate is defeated and his ballots transferred. 14 candidates have received the 10,001 quota. The election is over.

COMPARISON WITH OTHER METHODS: Election by single wards can permit a minority to go entirely unrepresented, or to capture an undesired majority of seats or even to capture all the seats where the majority is divided. Gerrymandering and population shifts tend to make wards unequal. In St. Louis, the Twenty-fourth Ward has four times as many voters as the Fifth Ward.

The present "winner-take-all-devil-take-the-hindmost" method of electing St. Louis Aldermen almost inevitably forces an organized spoils-fed minority into an entrenched monopolistic control. There exists no convincing data to prove that St. Louis is being governed by majority rule. Seven-eighths of St. Louis is without representation in the Board of Aldermen. This is a situation that has existed for 100 years, made up of 40,000 whites, 10,000 Negroes and a group made up of Democrats, Progressives, Independents, Socialists, etc., and those barred by racial and religious discrimination.

At the last Aldermanic election for even-numbered wards, there were at least 22,487 eligible voters in St. Louis (of "Registration of Voters in U. S." by J. P. Harria, p. 349). Yet the Republican party by poll, ing 35,000 votes captured all 15 Aldermanic offices, including its influential presidency.

Such, in a sketchy way, is the Hare system of P. R. Further information may be obtained gratis from the Proportional Representation League, 411 South Juniper street, Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, June 7.

DIRECTLY under the chamber of the House of Representatives in the Capitol is a noisy and spacious restaurant. Here Col. John Tilson breakfasts daily when the House is in session. Here members of Congress gather at the noon hour.

Since the place is operated under the supervision of the House, Congressmen feel free to criticize the food and service at will. And they do. Frequent are the complaints from them that the service and quality of foods are not commensurate with the price. The other day the whole thing was threatened out on the floor of the House. A club sandwich served as the piece de resistance. Charlie Underhill, who as chairman of the Committee on Accounts has charge of the restaurant, was the defendant. Frank Murphy led the attack.

UNDERHILL brought two club sandwiches into the chamber. One was from the House restaurant. The other was from the dining room of Washington's swankiest hotel. Before the eyes of the House he took the two sandwiches to pieces. The first—that from the hotel—indicated toast, two slices of tomato, a couple of strips of bacon, and in the words of Underhill, "a meager little slice of chicken." The second—from the House restaurant—contained toast, mayonnaise dressing, lettuce, tomato, and, again, in the words of Underhill, "a good sizable portion of chicken." The price of the first was 35 cents, that of the second 70 cents.

How, Underhill asked, in the face of the facts, can Murphy stick to his criticism of the restaurant for the coming year? The House Congressmen must pay in their own restaurants "rates equal to those charged in any first-class restaurant."

What peeved Underhill was that Murphy, who is chairman of a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, did not censure him when his committee went into the kitchen of the restaurant for the coming year. Instead, Murphy went to the clerk of the House on the ground that in previous years he had been unable to get such information from Underhill.

THE gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Murphy, "However, I think he should give the subcommittee a vote of thanks for providing him the opportunity of telling the world what a great restaurant deal he has become."

The House enjoyed the tilt hugely. Frankland of Alabama arose and facetiously remarked that he was not in the club sandwich class; he wanted to know if there was any controversy over a ham sandwich.

Another yelled at Underhill: "What about the little piece of cheese you used to give me with my apple pie?" "I discontinue the practice," retorted Underhill. "It was no larger than a razor blade. For a salad, you can get a real portion."

"And how much do you think that average on our cheese bill each month?" "About $140."

Biography as Fiction

VENTILATIONS: BEING BIOGRAPHICAL ASIDES, with caricatures by Eve Herrmann. (J. B. Lippincott Co. $2.50.)

ANY times the main thesis of a book is so sound that the reader accepts without too much question the unappealing medium through which the basic thought is presented. Rarely, however, is the medium so appealing that one finds it very nearly as justifiable for so, so dazzlingly to make the unsound main thesis a forgettable factor; but here it is with "Ventilations." Thus it is with "Ventilations." The little would indicate that Mr. Pearson's sole object is to let a little fresh air into the stuffiness of the room the world assigns to biography. This he accomplishes through a stimulating style and his gifts in the weaving out of an anecdote, the heavy does he tell his stories with charm, but since his stories, many of which Mr. Pearson says he has invented, always concern men of literary importance, they would appear to be of more than passing interest.

Despite Mr. Pearson's attempt to make us feel that his brilliant remarks are entirely casual, we cannot, however, fail to discern the framework over which he has thrown this tapestry of scintillating stories and style. "It is," to let him express it, "the day of the biographer; he is the dramatist, the essayist, the romanticist of the future." Lightly Mr. Pearson pushes aside the usual literary vehicles. He feels that the effort to give all sides of a biographical picture is futile at best and interferes, besides, with the unity important to any artistic work. His conclusion is amusingly simple. Since the biographer cannot give all sides, let him seize one, enlarge upon it, invent enough stories to make it seem real, and produce a biographical picture which is unified. He must form a mental plan of a character, and then make up the material which will prove him to be right. The term Mr. Pearson uses to describe this biography of the future—and there will be those among his readers who will suspect that they have heard with the monomaniac, if not the term, in the past—is "creative biography."

The author goes to much trouble to prove that Boswell did not introduce us to Dr. Johnson as he was, but instead, created a Dr. Johnson more to his liking and through lies, evasions, suppressions and deliberate padding has made the world believe his creation to have been Dr. Johnson himself. This, according to Mr. Pearson, makes Boswell the author of one of the greatest "personal biographies" in the English language—"Oscar Wilde," by Frank Harris, being the other.

To repeat the old and sound statement that truth is more important than, and not the same as, fact, does not explain why the literary man, interested primarily in producing unified psychological pictures, does not frankly write fiction.

PRESENTATION OF WOMAN AT BRITISH COURT CANCELED

No Explanation Given in Published Notice Concerning "Mrs. Christopher Courtney."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 7.—No explanation has been made of the cancellation of the court presentation of Mrs. Christopher Courtney, at the first royal court at Buckingham Palace, May 14.

The official London Gazette published the sparse three-line notice: "Lord Chamberlain's Office, 'St. James' Palace."

"Notice is hereby given that the presentation of Mrs. Christopher Courtney at their Majesty's court on May 14 has been canceled."

The London Morning Press republished the announcement, but made little hazard as to the identity of the Mrs. Courtney, evidently fearing to name the person. Only two papers ventured to name the person they thought to be the presentee, now disavowed.

Reports of the May 14 court said that Mrs. Courtney was presented by Lady Salmond, wife of Sir John Salmond of the Admiralty. The Daily Express today, seeking communication with Lady Salmond, was told by her husband, "My wife and I have no statement to make about it. Lady Salmond is upset at inquiries and it is impossible for anyone to hear her."

Neither does there any suggestion as to why the court action was taken. The records of presentees usually are investigated thoroughly. Divorcees have always been persona non grata.

The last parallel announcement was said here to have been made in 1923, cancelling the presentation in 1921 of Mrs. Eric Gordon to Queen Victoria. Mrs. Gordon later became Lady Granville Gordon.

There were more than 800 women presented at the royal court on the night of May 14, most of them by the diplomatic corps. They included eight American debutantes.

Franking Privilege for Mrs. Taft. Mrs. Helen H. Taft, widow of the former President and Chief Justice, would receive a franking privilege, as a reward with a long standing precedent, under a bill passed unanimously by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday. It has been the practice of the Government for many years to allow all mail sent by the wives of Presidents to be franked postage free during their lifetime.

BRADSTREET'S WEEKLY REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Bradstreet's today says real summer weather, with temperatures above the 90s in wide areas, is responsible for a slight pickup in retail trade. The report is an access of synthetic cheerfulness in wholesale and jobbing lines. Collections reports, too, were a shade more cheerful, and crops, although reporting rain need promise.

Industrial reports for the week on the other hand showed some evidence of the quieting down. Noted in late May, as far as the production of lumber, iron and steel, being carried over into June. The report on cotton production in May was a trifling below that of April, and the slow but steady drop in steel output output reported slightly in late May to proceed slightly further. The production and order of lumber was not greatly changed, while the cotton output was slightly on the raw cotton output of that date. The downward movement of the commodity index as shown in Bradstreet's index number was apparently not checked.

PRIMARY FILINGS DESIGNED TO AID MAYOR'S PLANS

Miller's Secretary Has Taken Leading Part in Selection of Candidates for City Offices.

THREAT AGAINST SCHMOLL RECALLED

Executive, in Last Campaign, Said He Would Make Circuit Clerk 'Walk
East Till Hat Floats.'

An obvious attempt by Mayor Miller to strengthen his political resources so as to further his future ambitions is seen in the nomination of the party committee to fill the office when the filing period closed last midnight.

With the closing of the books in the office of the Board of Election Commissioners, 56 persons had become candidates for nomination at the primary, Aug. 5. Of the number, 325 were Republicans, 157 Democrats and six Socialist Labor.

In offices where no candidate has filed, the party committee may fill in the ticket before the general election in November.

The number of candidates sets a new record, election officials reported, the highest number heretofore having been made in 1924 when 474 declarations were recorded. The "off year" elections, between years of presidential campaigns, always show a larger number of candidates because Justices of the Peace and Constables are elected then.

No little part in the selection of candidates has been taken by Jules R. Field, the Mayor's secretary, who served in the last mayoralty campaign as commandant at the Miller headquarters. To him some observers have given the credit for such decisions as that which led the administration to seek the strength of City Collector Edmond Koeln by giving him no opposition for nomination for re-election.

Koeln's organization, it is recognized, is the most potent political force outside the Miller legions.

Koeln is opposed by Richard Warner Reichard, 403 Corns avenue, whose name appears for the first time in the annals of city politics.

After Schmoll's Job.
The shadow of former campaigns also falls across the primary ballot this year. Campaigning against former Mayor Kiel, who was supported by Circuit Clerk John Schmoll, Miller, in a speech prior to the city election in March, 1929, declared he would "make John Schmoll walk east, until his hat floats." Harry L. Salisbury, Director of Public Safety, and close friend of the Mayor, politically and personally, has been brought out as a candidate against Schmoll.

The job, which requires about 50 employees, is important from the standpoint of patronage.

One of the most important things to a major political aspirant is control of the office of License Collector, having business with merchants and manufacturers. If John H. Grosse, City Register and former secretary to Mayor Miller, is nominated and elected he will be the administration "contact man" with this part of the populace. Also, there are about 35 office jobs to be filled. Grosse opposes Oliver G. Chapman, who is seeking a fourth term.

Congressman John J. Cochran, a Democrat, has no opposition for the nomination and no Republican candidate has chosen to oppose him in November. Congressman L. C. Dyer of the Twelfth District is opposed for Republican nomination by Waltham M. Moore, Negro member of the Legislature, who was discharged as an employee of the St. Louis State Automobile License Bureau by Secretary of State Backer when Moore announced as a candidate. John L. Ryan filed on the Democratic ticket.

William L. Bohnenkamp, 54674 Queens avenue, filed for the Republican nomination for Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, the Election Commissioner's office was notified by the Secretary of State. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Judge Charles H. Dues.

Each party will nominate six candidates for Circuit Judge in the Eighth Judicial Circuit, and six Judges will be elected in November. The Republicans are: Frank Landwehr, Granville Hogan, Robert W. Hall, M. Hartmann, incumbents, and Anthony P. Itner, Joseph T. Caffal, Arthur J. Freund and Mrs. Mabel Hinkley. Democratic candidates are: John T. Fitzsimmons, incumbent; Vincent L. Bolsabuin, James E. King, Spencer M. Thomas, Samuel R. Senfeld and James M. Douglas.

An unexpired term, ending December, 1934, also will be filled. Fred J. Hoffmeister and Leighton Shields, Republicans, and Edward H. Wayman, Democrat, have filed. Probate Judge Charles W. Holtcamp, a Republican, is a candidate to succeed himself, and Irvin H. Gamble filed for the Democratic nomination.

Judge Edward E. Butler of the Court of Criminal Correction, Division 1, seeks re-election and James J. Milligan and Henry R. Watson oppose each other for the Democratic nomination. In Division 2, J. Ray Weinbrenner, Republican, and Irwin Sale, Democrat, are candidates.

Candidates for State Senator.
For State Senator from the Thirtieth District, William F. Depelheuer, Republican; John Trantman, Democrat; and James Ralcoff, Socialist Labor, have filed. In the Thirty-second District the candidates are William Maffitt Bates, Republican; W. Rufus Jackson, Democrat; and Willard W. Cox, Socialist-Labor.

Edwin Nolte is the only Republican to file in the Thirty-fourth District, but Lloyd T. Watkins and Joseph A. Broderick are candidates for the Democratic nomination.

Democrats have made plans for a vigorous campaign, and a slate for major offices selected by a Citizens' Committee and endorsed by the Democratic City Committee was published yesterday in the Post-Dispatch.

STIMSON PERMITS THE FLOTATION OF YOUNG PLAN LOAN

State Secretary Announces
'No Objection' to It Following Formal Practice of Department.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 7.—Without awaiting final adjustment of the task of floating the first Young plan loan, the State Department announced it has no objection to the issuance in the United States of a part of the loan.

Still involved in delays by various technicalities confronting the committee charged with evolving the final agreement between the bankers and the German Government, the flotation of the loan is not expected for another week.

The portion of the loan to be floated in New York by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. has been estimated at $4,500,000, according to information from Paris. One-third of the total issue will be used as a loan to Germany and the remainder will be employed in the commercialization of German reparations bonds.

The issue price is expected to be 91 or 92, but Secretary Stimson and Undersecretary Coffin, who jointly announced the department's decision, said they had no definite information on the details of the loan so far as the New York market was concerned.

The syndicate asked the department whether it would disapprove the issue. The department, ever since it established its foreign loan policy after the World War, has followed the practice of not indicating its definite approval of an issue, but merely indicating whether it has objection to the flotation.

Congressman Attacks Stimson's Action as Reversal of Policy.
NEW YORK, June 7.—Congressman Louis T. McFadden of Pennsylvania has issued a statement here attacking the announcement of the State Department in Washington that it has no objection to flotation in the United States of part of the first Young plan loan.

"The statement issued by the Secretary of State and his assistant," he said, "gives the approval of the present administration to J. P. Morgan & Co. for the sale of German and reparations bonds to the extent, possibly, of $100,000,000, in the United States."

"Faithful to the European cause, the State Department, in this announcement brings powerful and sorely needed aid to the European Governments. By this action of our Government, it fixes a foreign policy for the United States of far-reaching consequences and one which reverses Government policy definitely followed since the war."

"It injects the United States into the midst of the most bitter and permanent intra-European feud that has ever torn that continent. And it does it through a long course of devious and secret diplomacy foreign heretofore to the councils of a republic and abhorrent to the long-tried principle of Republicanism."

"This action is a complete repudiation of the policy of the Coolidge administration in refusing to mix war debts with German reparations payments. American investors will now buy German reparations bonds heretofore held by the allied Governments with Government approval."

ST. LOUIS FIRE WITHDRAWS FROM FIRE INSURANCE SUIT

Says Its Name Was Included in Joint Action Without Its Knowledge.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 7.—The St. Louis Fire & Insurance Co., with headquarters in St. Louis, yesterday notified Joseph B. Thompson, State Superintendent of Insurance, that it was made a party without its knowledge to the suit filed in Cole County Circuit Court here Thursday by the St. Louis Fire & Insurance Co. to make the 16 2-3 per cent. increase rate effective. The company said it has notified the Subscribers' Actuarial Committee in Chicago, of which the fire insurance companies are members, that it desires its name withdrawn from the suit.

In a telegram to Thompson the company said it wired the committee that "your action in joining us in suit to supersede prohibition of this state in accordance with any reasonable ruling of its commissioner with respect to rate. Please, therefore, withdraw our name from this action."

The suit by the 57-companies Circuit Court brought virtually all the companies in the litigation to make effective the increased rates, applied for Dec. 30, last. One hundred and fifty-seven other companies last week filed individual suits in United States District Court here to prevent the Insurance Superintendent and Attorney General Stratton Shartel from interfering with the higher rate going into effect June 1. The Federal injunction case is set for hearing at St. Louis City June 16, while the suit in the State court was made returnable Oct. 6.

The Federal action was brought by individual suits to get a test to whether the companies lost money individually in Missouri for five years from 1924 to 1928 and were entitled to the 16 2-3 per cent. increase, while the State action was instituted to get a test as to whether all the companies lost money during the period.

BURGLAR DISARMS WATCHMAN, ESCAPES

Thief Caught in Store at 1138
Hodiamont Avenue Fights Guard.

Surprising a burglar in the grocery of Albert Ladg at 1138 Hodiamont avenue last night, Calvin Slover, 1575 Wagner terrace, a private watchman, captured him only to have the man escape when he took him out onto the sidewalk to search him.

Slover had noticed the door of the store open, with a lamp broken. Entering he covered the intruder with his revolver and took him outside. When he temporarily put his revolver in his left hand, the man turned on him and twisted the weapon out of Slover's possession, escaping on foot. A check at the store showed only 25 cents was missing from the cash register. Two shots were fired by a hold-up man at Smith L. Cline, 5410 Ruskin avenue, at 11 o'clock last night, when Cline attempted to pursue him into Fairgrounds Park, after he had wrested a purse containing $10 from Mrs. Emma Cline in front of the Fairgrounds Hotel, where she resides. Neither of the shots took effect, and Cline gave up the chase.

Manuel Wohl, 3903 St. Louis avenue, proprietor of the Economy Grocery Co., 2821 North Vandeventer avenue, and Joseph Schwartz, a clerk at the store, were forced into the refrigerator by an armed man who obtained $400 and a diamond ring, valued at $700, from Wohl.

A box of narcotics valued at $50, and $70 in cash, were obtained by a man who held up Leslie Thompson and his clerk, Woodrow Malloy, in Thompson's drug store at 3900 Ashland avenue, last night. On entering the store, the man presented a prescription for 26 tablets of morphine which Malloy took to Thompson for investigation. When both returned to the front of the store, and Thompson told the man the prescription was not valid, he drew a revolver and forced them to open a safe and a drawer containing the drugs and money.

Norman Scherman, 5615 Eitel avenue, was robbed of $18, and Miss Betty Darrow, 4153 McRee avenue, lost a diamond ring valued at $425, when an armed man forced them from a car in which they were sitting in front of Miss Darrow's home last night.

Police have been asked to investigate the theft of $438 from a safe at the Gasen Drug Co., 233 South Euclid avenue. Donald E. Lee,

FARMERS' GRAIN CORPORATION LEASES BURLINGTON ELEVATOR

Structure of 2,400,000 Bushels Capacity Has Barge Line Loading Facilities.

The Burlington Elevator, operated by the Marshall Hall Grain Corporation of St. Louis at the foot of East Grand avenue, has been leased to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation of Chicago. George S. Milnor, general manager of the latter concern, announced yesterday. The elevator has a storage capacity of 2,400,000 bushels and is equipped for loading grain barges on the Mississippi River. The new operators will take over the elevator as of June 1.

Acquisition of the St. Louis property is said to be the second largest deal for terminal elevator space closed by the Farmers' National within the last few days, the first having been the lease of 2,500,000 bushels space from the Consolidated Elevator Co. of Duluth, Minn. In announcing the transaction, Milnor called attention to the rapid development in the handling of export grain by the Government Barge Line, which operates regular service from St. Louis to New Orleans.

The Marshall Hall concern, of which W. T. Brooking is president, will continue in business in both domestic and export fields. Many of its employees at the Burlington Elevator will remain in the employ of the new operators. The Farmers' National is the grain corporation set up by the Federal Farm Board.

CONVICTED PASTOR PLANNING REVIVAL MEETING IN ALTON

The Rev. A. I. Shoemaker Says
Members of Former Congregation Had Invited Him.

The Rev. Alonzo L. Shoemaker, convicted at Alton yesterday of seducing Miss Bernice Ford, 19-year-old choir member at the Edwards Street Pentecostal Church, when he was pastor there in April, 1928, announced a few hours after the verdict that he was planning to hold a revival meeting at Alton next week.

Awaiting a hearing on his motion for a new trial, the Rev. Mr. Shoemaker said members of his former congregation at Alton had asked him to conduct a meeting. During the trial he preached nightly at Nutwood, 20 miles north of Alton.

The verdict carries a sentence of one to 10 years, the time to be decided by the State Parole Board.

4639A McKinley avenue, manager of the store, said the money had been taken between last Monday noon and 1 p. m. on Thursday, apparently after the combination had been worked open.

$24,200,000 SET ASIDE FOR FLOOD CONTROL

Plans Call for Protection Against Flow 25 Per Cent
Greater Than Record.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 7.—The War Department has set aside $24,200,000 for the task of controlling floods on the Mississippi.

As outlined under the congressional mandate, the project calls for the expenditure of $25,000,000 over a 10-year period. The allotment made yesterday left in the hands of the department $18,000,000 of the $35,000,000 appropriated for 1931 flood control on the Mississippi. This amount will be held in reserve for emergency activities.

While the department was developing plans for pushing the work ahead, a House committee, considering recommendations of Major-General Lytle Brown, Chief of Army Engineers, that certain changes be made in the Federal plan.

War Department officials said that use of the fund in levee building, reverts and special projects included in the flood control work, would considerably assist in relieving unemployment in the districts.

The work is designed to afford protection against a flow 25 per cent. larger than any flood of record. The work not only covers immediate levee construction, but the rehabilitation of destroyed levees, purchase and maintenance of machinery and the work of gun materials to projects under construction.

In addition rights to lands for floodways are being purchased by the Government. Studies and surveys are being made concerning costs and feasibility of rearmament and their benefit to local flood control and power.

They were charged with having the Kulaks, rich peasants, recting their influence and subverting toward weakening the collectivization movement and imposing action burdens on the poor peasants.

All-Star Field In Feature of Madison Card

Hurdle Race to Provide Feature At Kingshighway

With John Pease's crack Australian colt, Just Andrew, making his formal racing debut in a quarter mile sprint, Playgoer II, striving for his ninth victory in a futurity engagement marking the eleventh race of his career, Lord Burr, Captured Warrior, Flossie Mac and Moving Trigger resuming their distance championship debate over the three-eighths mile course, tonight's greyhound card at the Madison Kennel Club stands out as the best offering of the season.

Just Andrew will go to the post in the seventh race, with Paddock Judge, Winnie O'Groats and Mile Hill, winners of their last engagements; Plaything, victor in two of her last three races; Royal Meadows, Feinlin's Rifle and Burghley making up a fast and formidable field and one that figures to make the bridle and white Australian import step the distance in near record time to annex the coveted quarter in :26 1-5 to win by six lengths over a fast field in his initial effort and covering the distance in the dazzling time of :25 4-5 in his next tryout, which he captured by the handy margin of 10 lengths.

Arranged against Playgoer II in the tenth and feature engagement of tonight's card will be Bolace and Cops de Ome, the speedy futurity sprinters credited with winning the only races the pup has lost; Cashon, last year's Hawthorne champion and holder of three track records at the Chicago Jockey Club, and Swift and Sure, holder of the world record for the quarter mile hurdles; McGurk, former international champion; Concession and Dr. Harry, a pair that stepped the distance in :29 flat in their last races.

The three-eighths mile feature of tonight's card is regarded by greyhound men as the most important engagement of the season over that strenuous route. Captured Warrior, Lord Burr, Flossie Mac and Moving Trigger have each negotiated the distance in :40 flat in recent performances, tying with M. K., the only other distance speedster to cover the race in that time since the meet opened. Hawke's Gold, Hardbroad, Rocket Hawk and Dragon, all exceptional, complete the field of eight.

The first hurdle race here in several seasons will be presented at the Kingshighway "Kennele Club" tonight, the leapers going to the post in the tenth number over the futurity distance. The engagement will bring out Mable Malone, Dash O' Light, Gangrene, Darkest Eagle, Tulsa Red, King Juggler, Jolly Andy and Cold Water, and the jumpers should give the betting fraternity something to worry about, as none of the entrants ever has been seen here in hurdling action.

Mable Malone, recognized as one of the fastest hurdlers in America, likely will be the favorite. This John Allen import has garnered laurels over the broomstraw barriers at St. Petersburg, Tulsa and at Fairview in Chicago. Gangrene, the Comanche Kennels hopping speedster, holds the hurdling championship of Mexico City and is likely to give Mable Malone plenty of foot in the test. Dash O' Light, winner of schooling trials over the hurdles and should prove a factor to be reckoned with, while Cold Water ran a slight margin behind the California Kennels import. Darkest Eagle fell at the first brush in the schooling races, but recovered and breezed up from the rear to finish third, Tulsa Red, King Juggler and Jolly Andy are heralded as experienced jumpers, having run well over the hard way at several southern tracks.

Gesindheit, which has been running so sensationally over the long distance, will go to the chute in the eighth for a five-sixteenths engagement against Davies, Black Dix, Dark Warrior, Toots, Roaming Town, Catch Weight and Master Jamieson, all top-notchers over the lengthy path; and the ninth, a futurity, should prove exciting, with Rapaecallion, Flying Al, Haselmeire and Maid's Honor lined up against Galway May, Indian Runner, Passport and Acropolis.

Mike Murray won last night's sup race by a slight nose, in a blinket finish, and refunded $15. Jolly Irishman, Copper Head and Gog-A-Man, the heavily backed pups, failed to finish in the money. The race was ninth on the card and brought $50 added cash to John Allen Kennels, owner of the black-white racer, which also won the Inaugural Cup at the North Side oval, the only other cup race ever held at the new establishment.

SENATE DEFEATS ATTEMPT TO STOP POISONING ALCOHOL

Trydigs Tries to Attach Rider to Canned Fruit and Vegetable Bill.
WASHINGTON, June 7.—The Senate again defeated an effort to prevent by legislation the use of poisons in denaturing industrial alcohol.

The latest of repeated attempts by Senator Trydigs (Dem.) of Maryland was defeated 45 to 14, after he had blocked consideration of the Howell bill to tighten prohibition enforcement in the District of Columbia. Trydigs attempted to attach the amendment to a bill to regulate the labeling of canned fruits and vegetables. After its defeat, Trydigs said he would reoffer the proposal when the Senate returns to the consideration of wood or hogs or public lands or forest or something else that usually gets unanimous approval in the Senate.

In objecting to the Howell bill, Trydigs said that it would make it a crime to take a drink anywhere in Washington. He described an Army-Navy football game in Baltimore several years ago, at which, he said, 1000 glass flasks were found in the stadium in which the President and other high officials had occupied seats.

Seven-Story Structure, Damaged Last Christmas Day, Wrecked by Flames.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 7.—Fire that lighted the loop at 1 a. m. today and for a time threatened nearby department stores, was brought under control after it had destroyed the seven-story building formerly occupied by the American Express Co.

The interior of the building, which is on Monroe street, between Dearborn and Madison, was damaged by fire last Christmas day and flames today completed the destruction. Two firemen were injured by falling debris. Windows in the five-story Department Store, Bedell's and other business places nearby were broken, but the fire was confined to the express building. The cause of the fire was undetermined. Thousands of persons lined the streets watching the fire.

Fire insurance adjusters estimated the loss at $100,000.

By the Associated Press.
LINCOLN, Neb., June 7.—The Missouri River was responsible for the acquittal of Jesse Clark, island dweller, of a Federal liquor charge. PLEADS NOT GUILTY IN KILLING OF PACKING HOUSE OFFICER

Topoka, Kans., Prisoner, Who Accused Head of Firm as Instigator, to Have Hearing June 17.
By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kans., June 7.—Virgil Pointer, packing plant employee, pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday on a charge of murder, committed, according to his purported confession, at the suggestion of the president of the packing company, to which $20,000 in insurance was paid on the life of the vice president of the concern, Roy Kramer, 47 years old, who was murdered 10 weeks ago.

The 38-year-old roustabout was returned to jail in default of $25,000 bond pending his preliminary hearing June 17. The same date has been set for the preliminary hearing of Louis H. Kimmel, 43, president of the Kaw Packing Co., who is accused jointly with Pointer.

Asserting he was innocent and expressing the conviction that he would be vindicated, Kimmel resigned his office "for the good of the company." He is under $25,000 bond.

Pointer was stated by authorities to have confessed he killed Kramer with a club at the packing plant, and that he placed the body in front of Kramer's automobile on a highway here, jacked up a wheel and deflated a tire in order that death would appear to have been caused by the passing motor vehicle striking the man as he made repairs.

UPRISING IN INDO-CHINA DEBATED IN FRENCH CHAMBER

Communist Deputy Asserts Natives Are Persecuted; Conservatives Blame Bolsheviki for Riots.
PARIS, June 7.—Recent disorders in Indo-China in which both French colonial soldiers and native insurgents were killed, were attributed yesterday to widely divergent causes by speakers in the Chamber of Deputies. Deputy Moutet, a communist, blamed the disorders on the rise of "brute force" in administering the country, on unjust and excessive taxation and denial of the demands of the Annamites for a voice in the Government of their home-land.

Deputy Taittinger, Conservative, replied that the Government had not been stern enough in dealing with the rebellious movement which, he declared, was agitated and financed by Moscow. His charge was upheld by Deputy Outrey from Indo-China, who produced a list which he said contained the instructions sent to Bolshevik propagandists from Moscow to foment riots in the French colonies in the Far East.

Moutet asserted that villages had been destroyed on mere suspicion of harboring rebels, and that one village was bombed by planes. He said that 1000 people, including five women and six children, another village was razed, he affirmed, merely because a notable Annamite was captured on its territory.

PARIS, June 7.—Dispatches from Delat, Annam, said that two persons were killed and 17 wounded in demonstrations today. Two thousand Indo-Chinese manifestants, marching with red banners, demanding partition of land among the peasants and refusing to pay taxes, set out for Phu Luu. Annamite guards kept them out of the village. News of the disorders was received just as the Chamber of Deputies opened debate on the recent troubles in Indo-China.

The German Offensive Gets Under Way Journey's End

The novel on which the world-famous war play was based.

—By—
R. C. SHERRIFF and VERNON BARTLETT

CHAPTER XXVIII.

LONG before it was light there was movement in the signaller's dugout. Mason bustled himself with the fire, while Hammond by the light of a flickering candle made a poor attempt at washing cups which had been left dirty from the night before. Outside all was so quiet that it seemed difficult to believe there were any Germans within miles. It was bitterly cold. The only sign of the coming dawn was the gradual paling of the stars.

Mason pushed aside the curtain of the officers' dugout and touched Stanhope on the shoulder. He woke with a start—he never slept soundly now.

"Hullo," he said, "that you, Mason? What is it?"

"Art-past five, sir."

"Oh, right!" He sat up in his bed and stretched himself. "Damnably cold in here. You don't get a chance to sleep. Good Lord, I'm tired."

"I've made some 'ot tea, sir."

"Good! Better wake up the other officers and take them a cup."

"Very good, sir."

As soon as Mason had returned to his own dugout Stanhope got slowly to his feet and began to make ready for his work. His fingers were so cold that he fumbled angrily for several moments with his shirt-stud. His head was aching like the devil. If Jerry was going to attack he had chosen a pretty beastly morning for it, and the dugout was so curiously lonely now that Osborne's bed was empty—bloody cold and lonely.

As Stanhope was brushing his hair in front of the little metal mirror propped up against a jammy tin near the candle, Trotter came in from his own dugout. His face was partly hidden by thick white lather.

"Wash and brush up, tuppence!" he announced.

"Hullo, up already? Good man! The others awake?"

Trotter nodded. Then he went across to the steps and peered up into the trench. "Sounds like Jerry's out there. But you'll never know, do you?" His face lit up as Mason appeared, carrying four mugs of tea. "That's the stuff for the troops. A good cup of tea!"

Mason put one cup down at Stanhope's elbow and another at his. "And I've got a packet of sandwiches for each gentleman, sir."

Then he went off to the inner dugout with the other three cups in hand. Stanhope and Trotter sat huddled together, their faces glowing behind him.

Stanhope turned sharply from a dugout entrance and went to his table. After a few minutes he came back to his table. He lit a second pipe and, by its light, ran through the notes he had jotted down in his message book.

"Mason," he called.

"Coming, sir." He appeared with a neat packet wrapped in newspaper. "Four sandwiches, sir. Art-bully beef and art-bully sardine. Sardine on top, sir."

"How delicious. No pate de foie gras?"

"No what, sir?"

"No pate de foie gras?"

Mason hesitated before he replied. The Captain seemed in a good temper. "No, sir," he said. "The milkman ain't been yet." Then he hurried on for yet never knew with the Captain nowadays.

"You called, sir?"

"Yes. Clear up your kitchen a bit, dress, and join your platoon in the line."

"Very good, sir."

Stanhope turned back to his notes. "Runner!" he shouted. A signaller came in from the servants' dugout, and saluted.

"Ask the Sergeant-Major to come to see me."

"Very good, sir."

From the inner dugout came the sound of Trotter's voice, singing plaintively. "There's a long, long trail a-winding. No chance to work with a row like that going on. What an odd bird, too! Nothing ever upset him. Stanhope's scowl disappeared. He pulled a few coppers from his pocket, walked across to the entrance of Trotter's dugout, and threw the money inside. The singing stopped abruptly.

"Thank you kindly, guv'nor!" Trotter called out in his cherry voice.

The sergeant-major had arrived, and stood at the foot of the steps, stiff, inscrutable, and correct until Stanhope spoke to him, when he became human. He reported that the wiring parties had just finished their work, and had made a very decent job of it, with wire on each side of the company's sector, running right down to the support line.

"Good! Everything quiet?"

"It's all right opposite 'ere, sir. But the guns 'ave started a 'eavy bombardment down south. Not sure if it ain't spreading this way, sir."

"Very likely. The officers will be up in a minute. They'll stand by with their platoons."

"Very good, sir."

"Are the men having their tea?"

"Yes, sir."

"Let 'em have a decent drop of rum."

"About 'arf again, sir?"

"Yes. The attack may come any time up till midday. After then, I don't suppose it will come till tomorrow. That's all, I think, sergeant-major. I'll see you up there in a minute or two."

"Very good, sir."

Stanhope went across to Trotter's dugout again. "Ready?" he called.

"Good, sir."

"Good, sir."

"I don't think I'm—"

"I don't think I'm—"

"Well, damn it all, it's no good going up till I feel fit. That champagne's made my mouth feel like a bit of blotting-paper. Let's just have another drop of water."

"That's all right, sir," he said. "I'm sure I have no objection in annoying Miss O'Hara. As far as I'm concerned, we'll have no further use for her, and if she's told at the trial, she can settle with the Court."

"That's all," said Browning. "You were need Miss O'Hara any more?" Chris asked.

"Not unless he gets well—the feller that was shot," the officer said, with all the rancor of his type for the arrogant and idle rich. "If he does she may have to appear in this publicity."

"It seems to me a—well, if you'll excuse me a rotten thing," Christopher said, "that a man can't take a shot at an armed burglar in his own house, without dragging his friends, his guests through all this publicity."

"It isn't that," Brown explained, with the menacing patience of those who know that they are invincible. "It's that—looks here, now. I don't say it's often so, but suppose this young lady had framed this up with the burglar? How would I know?"

"It seems to me you're rather exceeding your authority, Christopher," Chris said, in a pause, in a tone Mary Kate had never heard from him before. "Anything that is in the line of your duty, by all means do," he went on, a white line forming about his mouth as he spoke, and his color reddening under his country tan, leaving his face pallid, "but don't diverge into any plot that you happen to remember from any book you may have read."

Griffith Advised Norma Shearer to Quit Movies But She Kept Right on Trying and Now She's a Great Star

Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney in "He Who Gets Sleeped."

"I CAN'T imagine myself going all through it again. And yet I cannot imagine myself not trying."

Thus does Norma Shearer regard her early struggles for a foothold to film fame, months of privation that stretched into years before her future in pictures was assured.

To fans who think only of the glamour of stardom, the story of Miss Shearer's hard knocks should be enlightening. Certainly it ought to give movie-struck girls considerable food for thought.

Miss Shearer, unlike most cinema aspirants, was not merely ambitious to be in pictures. She was compelled by financial reverses to make a living. Sheer necessity alone took her to New York from her home in Montreal, the modest budget for expenses dwindling with every meal.

For six months she made the rounds of studios for extra work. Rain or shine, she had to be at the casting office early each day. Her first "break" in pictures came when she landed three days' work in a college picture. The next job brought $100 a week to the embryo star. That is, for just one week. After that she turned back to endless rounds of casting offices, extra bits and gas.

It took her a long time to get a shot at night because of some of the parts I had to play," she told me. "Other girls were getting parts I wanted and all the arguments I gave Mr. Thalberg served no purpose. He was simply adamant. I realize now the experience was invaluable."

"A year after I became a star, Mr. Thalberg's secretary called me on the telephone to ask me if I were going to a certain theater opening. I told her I wasn't, that I hadn't been invited. She said she was inquiring because Mr. Thalberg wanted to invite me, but I didn't want to be turned down if I had a date with someone else."

"It was the first time he ever emerged from his business shell. I was secretly thrilled but I ever feel like asking him, 'Why not speak for yourself, Irving? Did I accept?' Promptly, I didn't want to give him time enough to think it over and change his mind."

AS A STAR of ranking magnitude, having eclipsed her silent film favor with her sensational success in talking pictures, Miss Shearer occupies a unique position in the motion picture world. Contrary to general belief, she had no stage experience whatever and no voice training before she made her vocal debut in "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

"The fact is," she explained, "that I did go to the University of Southern California for a voice analysis when our studio began installing sound equipment. The day I went to the college, however, their experimental device was out of order and I did not have the benefit of the test."

Miss Shearer's natural crispness in speaking, sound technicians say, makes her recordings exceptionally clear and well-defined. Incidentally, her brother, Doug, is the chief recording engineer at the M-G-M studios, having developed many mechanical innovations now in general use in sound recording systems. Norma is very proud of her brother and it is needless to say he is immensely proud of his sister.

Miss Shearer is regarded as one of the best dressed women on the screen and usually may be seen wearing smart sport ensembles when not before the camera. Her skin is almost transparent pink and her eyes are the bluest of blue, accentuating the color in her cheeks. She has semibobbed brown hair, worn in swirling coils. Her weight averages 115 pounds and she is just five feet, one inch tall.

ONE of Miss Shearer's most distinctive traits is her fidelity to detail in work and home. She personally takes care of her business or social details and is one of the few stars who carefully digest criticism or praise in fan mail and picture reviews. She gives enormous time to preparation for her screen roles, testing every gown to be used in her wardrobe, new hair dresses and facial makeup. Every principal player who appears with her in pictures is tested photographically as well as vocally before actual work begins. In this manner she avoids any photographic or recording injustice to herself or any member or members of her supporting cast.

She is very punctual about any and all appointments and expects everyone else to be punctual with her. She has an amazing memory as though every slight happening or meeting automatically becomes mentally catalogued and filed in a very efficient index from which it may be snatched in an instant.

BORN in Canada, where outdoor sports are a natural diversion, Miss Shearer takes her place among Hollywood's most ardent and energetic women athletes. She particularly excels in tennis, swimming and high-diving. Like Marion Davies, she is not inclined to equestrian sports, rather fearing horses.

Miss Shearer is one of the few stars who does not maintain a lavish home. She has never built a home and doesn't own one, although she plans some day to decide just what her domicile needs and wants are, and to build accordingly. In summer months she has been renting Bebe Daniels' beach cottage. In the winter she has been renting Elsie Janis' house in Beverly Hills.

One of Hollywood's happiest married women, Miss Shearer has very fixed ideas of a wife's responsibility and makes it a point to accompany her husband as far as possible on business as well as social engagements. She believes a wife should be her husband's pal as well as his sweetheart but, at the same time, also believe there are times when the wife should surrender him to "the boys" for a poker game or a night out.

The next article on these pages in the series, "The Truth About Hollywood," will tell of Constance Bennett. It will appear Tuesday.

She gives enormous time to preparation for her screen roles, testing every gown to be used in her wardrobe, new hair dresses and facial makeup. Every principal player who appears with her in pictures is tested photographically as well as vocally before actual work begins. In this manner she avoids any photographic or recording injustice to herself or any member or members of her supporting cast.

She is very punctual about any and all appointments and expects everyone else to be punctual with her. She has an amazing memory as though every slight happening or meeting automatically becomes mentally catalogued and filed in a very efficient index from which it may be snatched in an instant.

BORN in Canada, where outdoor sports are a natural diversion, Miss Shearer takes her place among Hollywood's most ardent and energetic women athletes. She particularly excels in tennis, swimming and high-diving. Like Marion Davies, she is not inclined to equestrian sports, rather fearing horses.

Miss Shearer is one of the few stars who does not maintain a lavish home. She has never built a home and doesn't own one, although she plans some day to decide just what her domicile needs and wants are, and to build accordingly. In summer months she has been renting Bebe Daniels' beach cottage. In the winter she has been renting Elsie Janis' house in Beverly Hills.

One of Hollywood's happiest married women, Miss Shearer has very fixed ideas of a wife's responsibility and makes it a point to accompany her husband as far as possible on business as well as social engagements. She believes a wife should be her husband's pal as well as his sweetheart but, at the same time, also believe there are times when the wife should surrender him to "the boys" for a poker game or a night out.

The next article on these pages in the series, "The Truth About Hollywood," will tell of Constance Bennett. It will appear Tuesday.

When Miss Shearer was an unknown actress trying to get a start in the film.

With Lou Cody in "His Secretary," one of her first successes.

place in the motion picture world. Contrary to general belief, she had no stage experience whatever and no voice training before she made her vocal debut in "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

"The fact is," she explained, "that I did go to the University of Southern California for a voice analysis when our studio began installing sound equipment. The day I went to the college, however, their experimental device was out of order and I did not have the benefit of the test."

Miss Shearer's natural crispness in speaking, sound technicians say, makes her recordings exceptionally clear and well-defined. Incidentally, her brother, Doug, is the chief recording engineer at the M-G-M studios, having developed many mechanical innovations now in general use in sound recording systems. Norma is very proud of her brother and it is needless to say he is immensely proud of his sister.

Miss Shearer is regarded as one of the best dressed women on the screen and usually may be seen wearing smart sport ensembles when not before the camera. Her skin is almost transparent pink and her eyes are the bluest of blue, accentuating the color in her cheeks. She has semibobbed brown hair, worn in swirling coils. Her weight averages 115 pounds and she is just five feet, one inch tall.

ONE of Miss Shearer's most distinctive traits is her fidelity to detail in work and home. She personally takes care of her business or social details and is one of the few stars who carefully digest criticism or praise in fan mail and picture reviews. She gives enormous time to preparation for her screen roles, testing every gown to be used in her wardrobe, new hair dresses and facial makeup. Every principal player who appears with her in pictures is tested photographically as well as vocally before actual work begins. In this manner she avoids any photographic or recording injustice to herself or any member or members of her supporting cast.

TELL IT —To— SALLY

Irene is a Perfect Example of Why Girls Leave Their Homes.

By SALLY MARTIN

IRENE is twenty-two...and holds a man-sized job down town. Yet every time she mentions the possibility of stepping out among 'em, Mama throws a fit and several tantrums, and she won't have her darling associate with any of them. And she pulls the same line on Irene's three sisters.

How does she expect them to learn to live with their fellow humans? She doesn't expect them to. She hates everyone, including herself. It's a tragic story. And a much too common one.

"Dear Sally—

"I wonder if you can't give me a little help. I read your column daily, but I never thought I'd be writing to you. Yet here I am. I've got a problem that's just driving me mad. It's my mother. There are four of us girls, from 18 to 25, and when any of us talk about going out, or having a 'date,' why she positively goes into a fit. She says that all men are no good, and that she doesn't intend to allow us to associate with them if she can help it, and asks us what we think she keeps a home for us for, any way, etc., etc., until we're all nearly mad. Usually, to avoid further outbreaks and tantrums we stay at home. But it's getting unbearable.

"I never have any dates. You can't see the way she acts. And I positively shiver at the thought of the shrieking, dead existence I lead. I shiver at the thought of being an old maid. Is that pride?"

"And I'm so used to staying at home that when I do manage to go anywhere I'm tongue-tied and feel like 'Miss Inferior' personified. I wonder if anyone else in the world feels like I do.

"IRENE."

Tell your mother. And you're not only entitled to fun—you're entitled to life!

Put it up to Mother, with tact and kindness, but also with firmness, that if you can't go out with your friends, or bring them into your home, you and your sisters will have to find another place where you can live, in a friendly, wholesome atmosphere.

Multi-Strand Necklace

WHEN designers are sure they have conceived a good thing—usually they stick to it. The recent openings in Fashion have shown that the spiral necklace is a certainty in the mode. Lucile Paray enhances her costumes with two-color necklaces composed of many strands of small beads. Patou favors three-strand ropes. The spiral necklace in a long choker uses fine silver wires in graduated effect somewhat like a fine spring. Black polka dotted beads at the front add a note of contrast in one choker. Lelong, like the choker of crystal rondels in spiral effect.

Specially designed for the pastel chiffon prints is a braided pastel necklace made of extremely fine frosted threads in multi-colors with a bowknot and tassel in front.

A ladder from Chanel is composed of white composition pieces in oblong shape strung with gold balls in between, this hanging around the neck like a long wide collar. Louise Boulanger created a choker of clustered glass flowers strung on a fine thread and in multi-color pastels.

Blackberries and Apple Jelly.

Sometimes if we are not on the job the blackberry season will pass by without our doing up this delightful jelly. Six pounds blackberries, three pounds sugar, apples, lemons, and sliced raisins. Place in preserving kettle and cook in cold water. Cook until the fruit is soft. Drain the juice through a muslin bag and to every pint of juice add three-fourths cup sugar. Boil until it jellies when tested in a saucer on the ice, skimming constantly. Pour into sterilized jars and seal when cold.

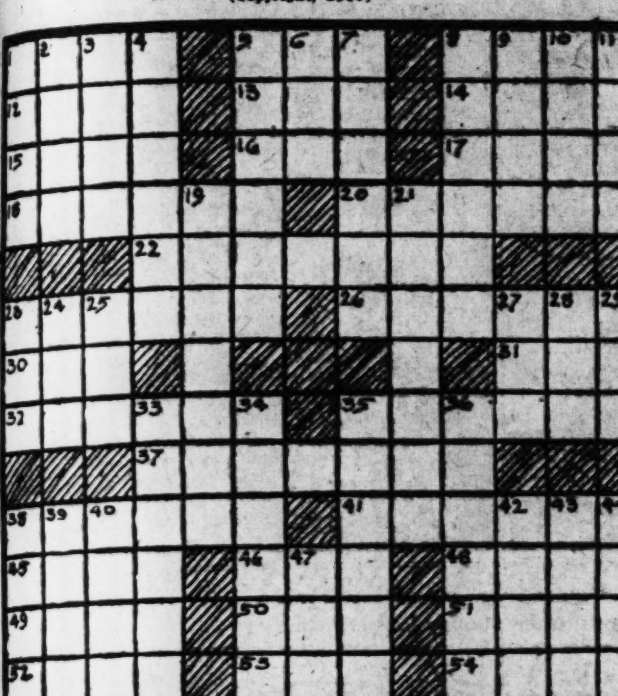

Shrink Them First.

It is always wise to shrink garments and materials for house dresses, as they are laundered so often and used so hardily. If soaked in salt or vinegar solution, one cup of salt or one-half cup vinegar to each gallon of water, and then hung straight on the line in a shady place, the dress will not only be proof against shrinking but the colors will be set as well. Then cut out your dress and rest assured it will fit until worn out.

ROMAN BANK
CASHIER HELD IN SHORTAGE
OF $51,600

Bess Oblinger of Shawneetown (Ill.) Depository Charged With Embezzlement in Federal Warrant.

NO EVENTS LED TO DETECTION

Death of Son and Unexpected Visit of Examiner Exposed Her—Bank forced to Sell Assets to Competitor.

Shawneetown, Ill., June 5.—The death of her 21-year-old son in an automobile accident, followed 10 days by an unexpected visit from a Federal bank examiner, disclosed that Mrs. Bess Oblinger, cashier of the City National Bank here, had misappropriated $51,600 of the bank's money, W. Brinkley, president of the depository, said tonight.

Mrs. Oblinger, a widow, and daughter of a former president of the bank, was arrested today on a Federal warrant charging embezzlement. She was taken to Harburg by a Deputy Marshal and released on $10,000 bond.

Disclosure of the shortage on June 19, caused directors of the bank to sell its assets to the National Bank of Shawneetown, in order to avoid being closed by the bank examiner, Brinkley said. The depository with total resources of $100,000, was capitalized for $25,000 and had a surplus of $15,000. The bank was protected against loss by a $5000 surety bond.

All Depositors Paid.

"We paid off all our depositors," Brinkley said. "Stockholders, who can be assessed 100 per cent for the amount of stock they own, will pay most of the loss. We directors will pay the rest. I hope it won't be much over the stock assessment, but the bank had a lot of real estate we had loaned money on in those hard times, and we excess over the assessment will depend upon how much we can get for the real estate. It's hard to tell for any price these days."

The bank's loss, Brinkley's statement indicates, will be at least $50,000, inasmuch as the capital, surplus, and a 100 per cent stock assessment, less the amount recoverable under the surety bond, day this figure.

Mrs. Oblinger, who had been cashier of the bank for 15 years, confessed to Brinkley and the examiner, Edward Van Ord, that she had taken all the money within the last two years, Brinkley said. He was elected president of the bank 18 years ago, after Mrs. Oblinger's father, who formerly held the position, died.

"She told us she took the money to pay her father's debts," Brinkley explained. "But so far, we have been unable to ascertain that any of her debts have been paid. Most of what she misappropriated was money, the rest bonds."

Removed Ledger Sheets.

According to Brinkley, Mrs. Oblinger's practice had been to delete bank examiners by removing certain ledger sheets during examinations. Upset over the death of her son, an only child, who was killed when his automobile overturned at high speed, just outside Shawneetown city limits, she apparently failed to make the removals in time when Van Ord popped in unexpectedly, 10 days after the accident.

Mrs. Oblinger is 43 years old and has lived uninterruptedly at the home of her parents since the death of her husband 23 years ago.

The warrant issued by United States District Attorney Baker yesterday charges her with embezzlement of $51,600, as Mrs. Oblinger assured Brinkley, the latter said, that the shortage would not exceed that figure. Van Ord's examination, however, showed it to be $51,600.

Shawneetown is in Gallatin County, in the southeastern portion of the State.

Dawes Sails for Home.

SOLTIAMPTON, June 5.—Ambassador Dawes sailed for the United States today on the Aquitania for a vacation. "There is nothing I can say," he said. "Other than that I am looking forward to a good time on my vacation."
